Editorial

Contributors please...

The journal with new get up and format has been well received by all. Efforts are on to improve it further. Some well wishers have advised to be scrupulous in selection of articles for publications. We are aware of this aspect very much. Inspite of repeated requests made through the editorial notes and personal communications, a large number of our contributors fail to follow instructions and continue to send articles half baked and not as per format of the journal. Many a times the contributors do not even care to read the manuscript carefully before forwarding to this office and leave a number of typographic and other mistakes which waste a lot of time of scrutinizer. Indulgence in plagiarism is also in vogue, which even create ethical problems at times.

After all editor inspte of strict scrutiny would publish material out of what he receives from the contributors. Quality control of scientific material could only improve with unstinted and sincere cooperation from the providers, the contributors.

I would once again stress and request contributors to come forward and help journal committee on this front. Before forwarding article to this journal, make it a habit of self assessing the same and make sure that it is of an optimum standard scientifically based on original research or study. It is advisable to discuss the article with your professional colleagues or guide or even in institutional scientific forum before sending for publication.

A contributor should understand that an article is aimed to share scientific views with the professional colleagues and academician and not just to earn credit points.

Could the journal committee look forward to our astute contributors for high quality scientific contributions of which the journal could be proud of.

Chief Editor