From the Desk of the Editors

Greetings!!!

I welcome you to the third issue of the Journal of Contemporary Law and Society.

The Journal is trying to keep pace with the recent surge in research in diverse and interdisciplinary studies. This issue is a witness to it.

Environmental Crime is a threat to ecology and wellbeing. The endeavour of understanding such crime from the perspective of Green Victimology is a theoretical leap towards acknowledging the cause of the non-human victims. The first technical article traces the evolution of Green Victimology in the 21st century.

Technical article on Digital Economy is a pathbreaking novel move towards the recent dimensions in the market with special reference to ASEAN and Fintech.

Acknowledging intersectionality in addressing victim perspective opens up the scope of research in victimology in a relevant dimension.

Further, embracing the role of technology in bail and focusing on its implications is an eye opener for practitioners and academicians at large.

Finally the biasness of the judiciary in rape cases in considering women of easy virtue and undermining the justice system is a heart wrenching critique of the sentencing process and the court.

We thank all the authors for their contribution to the third issue of the journal.

We are also grateful to our readers for showing interest in the journal.

We request everyone to share their research with us.

Best wishes
The Editorial Team.
