Emotional Entanglements and 'Mothers' Touch'

Dr. N. Usha Devi
Asso. Professor,Dept. of Sanskrit, Sree Sankara College, Kalady.

Submitted on: 05/05/2019 Revised on: 08/06/2019 Accepted on: 12/06/2019

Beyond the metaphorical and romanticized perspective of motherhood there lies a significant phenomenon between a mother and a child. When we take seriously the true complexity of motherhood in this context, we can find that the mother-child relationship is philosophically and scientifically speaking very rich indeed. The fact that this relationship forms the backbone of development of the child is to be understood in a reflective perspective. Romanticizing any type of relationship between mother and child can even become counterproductive, for, it has limitations. Emotion can be thought-provoking, but it is also thoughtful and reflective in itself; it reveals on its own in situations before it is fully reflected upon by giving rise to dire situations. In certain cases even genuine mutuality of relation cannot overcome the emotions in the child. Conflicted mothers also cannot be deliberative and are unable to resist emotional outcomes of their progeny. Thus there must be a continually renewed commitment or adoption on the part of the mother to care for the progeny. A sense of unanimity with the child may motivate an ethical response or diffuse forces of de-recognition of interpersonal divergence. It is astonishing that there is a phenomenon called 'flow of energy' between the mother and the child that has wider connotations in the child-development and needs careful attention. It is the phenomenon called 'entanglement' between the mother and the child.

The Essence of 'Motherhood' and Entanglement

We all want to love us, to belong to others, to be loved and to love. The truth is that all this is potentiate in the human nature. Human life from its very beginning keeps a peculiar sort of entanglement to another person. Entanglement is a term generally used in quantum theory to describe the way particles of energy/ matter can become correlated to predictably interact with each other regardless of how far apart they are. Particles, such as photons, electrons, or orbits that have interacted with each other retain a type of connection and can be entangled with each other in pairs, in the process known as correlation. Quantum entanglement allows orbits that are separated by incredible distances to interact with each other immediately, in a communication that is not limited to the speed of light. No matter how great the distance between the correlated particles, they will remain entangled as long as they are isolated.

The same phenomenon of 'entanglement' is applicable to beings as when two particles (one particle being ourself and another being the other person) mirror each other irrespective of the distance in between. Spiritually considered the fact is that we are all traceable to the one and so are we all 'one' while for Big Bang theory, everything originated from one source and then diversified into smaller particles. This implies that two persons can be connected at the quanta level and the photon light waves within them get transferred and intermingle between the two different cells. It is interesting that when two fields of correlate particles are merged in this way, it emerges in the form of co-dependency or intimate love-making and this will result in what is called entanglement. Such a phenomenon is also traceable precisely to the ancient texts in India, especially the Upaniṣads and it is also one of the sources of the unique and specific mode of treatment in Ayurveda.

The instantiations called "Mothers touch"

The concept of 'Mother' had ubiquitous significance in ancient India. Equated with the divine power herself she is the real sustainer of each progeny of life. The syntax of 'Matṛ devo bhava' is the genuine expression of the relation between the progeny and herself. This had created an orderly and structured pattern of life system. The father had become the creator only, witnessing all the functional aspects of the mother. Every time she engages with some progeny she becomes entangled in relationship and there have ever been emotionally felt relationship between these two in spite of being separated at a distance, the primary overriding energy sustained the distance between her and the progeny while making love. The sensitivity to the energetic entanglement that surrounds the mother is of great value. Not only does the energy of the child merge with that of the mother, but also there is a flow of energy -current from the mother to the offspring. This makes it pretty clear why selection and integrity in sharing your energy with your closest personality, the mother, the most affectionate, should be high on your list and should be your ultimate choice.

The Law of Karma and Quantum Entanglement

It's a complex universe we live within and there are laws (the law of karma) that create the very essence of our well- being. It is not just the food we eat or the people we hang out with, but by the choices we make with every interaction and on multiple levels of consciousness. Most people in this world do not have access to these levels of awareness that dwell in the quantum field of entanglement that is brought through the mother's integral 'touch'. The entanglements that hinder or block the path of success and happiness in current life are to be the centre-point of concern for a psychologist. According to ancient seers in India such an entanglement is certainly traced to the law of karma (rta) and all this for a scientist is quantum entanglement where two particles, no matter how far in distance or time from one another, have a distinct relationship that keeps them bound energetically at the quanta level, this is an interface of past and future or parallel realities/dimensions that are all correlating amongst one another.

The mother being the core of an intimate relation with is a part of one's story and this will continue on with the cellular memory that stores one's emotional body experiences throughout time and space. The soul continues to store the physical encounters expressed in the form of emotions which are replicated and repeated throughout the lifetime if entanglement is not attended upon. Such a soul that continues to repeat expressively emotional and mental patterns that are not yet well attended become traumatic or dysfunctional aspects of the relationship and that quanta which is one unit then disperses into other fields thereby expressing emotions in different ways, though they are merged and united by entanglement.

Entanglements behave like fine wires that are energetically charged and co-dependent upon one another. It's important that when the progeny is in emotional entanglement it is in constant need of the physical connection with the closest person who has the capability to create a powerful dynamics in their relationships. It is to be noted that entanglements may be carried from past lives also. When entanglements take place from past lives, there is the possibility of a soul having a profound connection with mother which may not be the same case as in the previous life. It might even be an unhealthy relationship but this one compels one to stay in that state due to the law of karma and that is entanglement. The emotional body understands its past records of touch it has kept with every single motherly soul.

The Vulnerability problem

The atoms were connected via 'entanglement', which means that an action performed on one atom will reverberate on any atom entangled with it, even if the particles are far apart. The huge cloud of entangled atoms is the first 'macroscopic spin singlet', a new state of matter that was predicted but never before realized. The case of a desperate world with a preponderance of emotional entanglement corresponds with this. There is entanglement in the form of dislikes rather than likes.

The syntactical relation in 'Matṛdevo bhava' in the form of family life in current exhibitions of the social scenario marks a wide deviation in the case of parenthood. Accepting dumb-founded the western mode of parenthood which has not much role for the parents in the fuller development of a progeny, it can be said that the so-called generation gap problem has vented into the structural complexity in the Indian context. The nuclear family concept had mitigated the problem much to its credit of the child and not for the mother. The change in attitude 'whatever the child asks for instantiations, we will provide by any means' stands in wrong appreciation of the concept of 'Matṛdevo bhava' and that is the major challenge arisen in case of the Indian mode of living. The 'more is better' philosophy behind modernization, globalization and universalism has caused immense stress on our brains making us constantly to move 'on' and depend on saying 'it is busy time'. The lack of self-assertiveness in the case of a progeny is a result of their emotional entanglement. Another important factor in this regard is the feeling of intense dislike towards others as a result of the emotional perplexes. Absence of sobriety has increased the vulnerability of entanglement. May be technical know-how and faster communication of the progeny on higher magnitude but this is not enough for the enmeshing of the entanglement. The fact is that no symptomatic social order can persist without genuine recognition of parenthood. What the younger generation silently suffering is nothing else than these estranged emotional entanglements. The purity of mind with which the mother takes care of their offspring is also a reverberative potential phenomenon that may lead to the entanglement.

It is little too much hard to digest the fact that mother Earth is the best sustainer of her progeny. Every progeny in the form of 'seed' is concealed in its environment of five gross elements. The concealed things get revealed, coming out of the womb of these elements. These become spatially extended and have a span of life getting dissolved at the end of life. It is the energy-system perfection that sustains the earth and the life elements. Not only does the energy system functions within but outside also that has an adventitious impact on the functioning of the energy- system. Any emotional trouble, rather, may be suspected as a case of internal adjustment. It may be torture for some but does not indicate that it has all the negative impact. The outward force (the centripetal force), the inward force of magnetic field of the earth, the circulating energy of convection currents within the earth and in the oceanic waters, the airs etc are the causative phenomena that giving rise to either entanglement or perversion. The same case can be witnessed in a mother or father but circulation of energy is more prevalent in a mother, for, considered polaritically, the mother is in the negative polarity. No doubt, the emotions are the perplexes within the energy circulations and if controlled, it will have the leverage of a joyous life.

The Energy Entanglement

As the mind is considered as the centre of all these perplexive energy domains, the investigation into the energy entanglements by the ancient Indian seers especially the Upaniṣadic ones, have found that the restraint of the functions of the mind has the most significant achievement in life: 'Mana eva manuṣyanam kāraṇam bandhamokshayoh'. The relational entanglements are ascribed to the mind. The energy movement is through the five vital airs. A better coordination and control of these is the essential component of the contributed continuum of energy within the material body- complex. As such is the case, the energy movement takes place through the somatic components. The quanta of energy or photons move in the same way from somatic components and get transferred from to another. The continuous movement of these quanta of energy from one body to another in touch brings in energy transfer. The best component of energy that has to be transferred is from the perfected mother to her progeny. Any imbalanced energy flow may lead to emotional entanglement.

Emotional Entanglement - What it implies

Now, before going to some of the issues on entanglement related to emotional perplexes, it is first necessary to understand what actually entanglement is. The heart and soul (or better to address it as the mind) represent the mechanical system and has the collocation of all internal relations. Everything that entails about the ways these outcomes of the mechanical collocations represent is what is called the behaviour or more specifically to speak, the 'emotions'. This means that understanding what an 'emotional expression' is, inseparable from familiarity with the internal functioning of energy collocations. These emotional perplexes normally will come out as aggressive attitudes, somatic disorders and most expressively as depressions. But there are also positive expressions of the emotional exegetics, like earnest love towards others, behavioural representations etc - i.e. beauty of the mind and heart.

The question now is- how the beauty is originated? The solution that can be put forward is the issue of entanglement. To define entanglement, it is a measurable phenomenon that each energy system or specifically particles in nature exhibit and which is an instantaneous connection between particles which are observed to interact with one another instantaneously as if to exhibit action-at- a distance according to Maudlin. The entanglement is a relation which can be understood only through a reflective analysis of its outcome as emotions. An example of such a relation is attraction of two persons at-a-distance like that of the gravitational force. Such a relation is the conjunction of two non-complex relates such as attraction and distance. Similarly, the conjectural relation between the different energy- force within the body which may be expressed as emotions, but referred to as attitudes or behavioural patterns.

It is interesting to note that the entanglement phenomenon expressed in human nature as a factual relation between parents and their progeny is more specific in the sense that parents are at a distance attracted towards the child. It is the energy transformation that the child witnesses and gets into its system from the mother, for, the mother is more prone to the issue of entanglement. What the father can do most is blessing the progeny with minimal touch, an energy transfer specified by knowledge.. The mother on the other hand, being the energy- transformation mechanism herself, can transfer the movements to the progeny. This can be carried on through the continuous contact with the child. A more and more clear passage or conjunction of energy takes place between a mother and a child through a soothing touch. This will definitely expect to bring in a specific conjunction of energy elements within the body of the child and there arises the entanglement relation. This entanglement is expressive in the form of love, good behaviour etc giving credence to the fact that what happens in the mother cannot be isolated from that of the progeny. Similarly, the concerns of the mother in the form of reflexive reverberations will develop into 'emotional redundancies'. The result is prominently expressed in depression.

What is more noteworthy is that a father can do little here, for, his energy mechanism cannot be easily transferred due to the polarity of quanta. So a father's touch can only have a 'guide' nature while that of the mother which is a case of energy circulation is effectually the emotional structure of the mind of the progeny. In the current times, it is the concern of the community that the required touch of the mother has much reduced whereas the touch of the father has much increased. The outcome is the increase of knowledge- content and the increase in the level of emotional expressions like depression, anxiety etc. Further, the reversed flow of energy from the progeny to the parents whose energy has the capacity to neutralize the emotional entanglements has reduced in intensity due to excessive overflow in the opposite direction. The result is the instantiations of relational collocations and loss of love etc. Actually, this energy flow is not the mechanical flow of energy but it is the energy developed within due to entanglement of the subtle energy systems.

Now, it is true that the influence of the 'infinite' or 'unknown existent' has to be taken into account in this entanglement phenomenon. As a 'mother's touch', the grace of the infinite, or let it be the 'unknown something' is of high relevance in the process, for, ultimately, it is the force that when finely tuned, brings in beneficial results and on contrariety, it is 'estrangement'. The energy-flow mechanism is thus more under the control of the universal Shakti which is nothing else than the mother herself. So a lovely touch of mother is a most desired act for emotional entanglement. It is to bear in mind that the mother's sense of purity of thought and action is a much desired fact. Again, it is to be recognized by each progeny that the collocative function of the energy also needs the acceptance by them with sincerity and purity of mind. Then only the flow-system of energy will be smoothened (otherwise, it will be a 'blind spot' or saying 'mind your business').

Does this entanglement be measurable?

Though it is not measurable in quantity like that of the quanta, it is possible through the quantum of its expression in the form of emotional attitudes. In a psychological analysis, a deep knowledge of this entanglement function is deservedly of great relevance. The entanglement can be measured in terms of aggressiveness of the child, love and attitude towards others and behavioural patterns. Depressions can also become a measure of this energy transfer. How the entanglement process operates is a case to be understood carefully.

The Entanglement process

To focus on the definiteness with which the entanglement or otherwise the energy collocation occurs, it is that the energy of the mother that is non-distinct from universal energy with purified mind and thoughts through her soothing touch releases the energy to her offspring through the neuro tic transmitters. This energy is taken by the neurotic receivers of the progeny which is instantaneously transferred to the somatic cells and that activates the somatic functions and the energy potentiate in the cells as 'emotions' gets neutralized and this energy is then reflexed to the mind, the central coordinator of the energy- system. Then that will make the thought functions changed and the child develops a love and affiliation function or the function of what is called the bodily integrity. The emotional energy contained in the cell that is not neutralized will be mostly ejected from the somatic cells and is transferred back to the mother's body where it may get neutralized or may be suppressed within the child's somatic cell itself to be expressed later. It is thus like an electric flow that is instantaneous on the contact phenomenon only. But in the case of the mother's touch, the impact lies for long.

Now, revisiting the mode of living of the ancient Indians, it can be found that the mother ever took care of her child with her soothing hands whereas the father has the role of blessing the child with his hands at a distance or a simple touch on the head. The latter also is a case of transfer of energy but it is mainly restricted to the knowledge or conscious energy. Through this, the father's energy in the form of knowledge gets transferred to certain extent. It is significant to notice that the father's energy is constitutively difficult to get transferred which is strengthened by the higher mental coordination or to speak of the polarity of the quanta. So a mother's kissing or hugging a child is more fruitful.

The Entanglement and the 'touch':

A mother's touch can positively bring compassionate feeling, calmness, courage, acceptance, contentment, cheerfulness, charity, commitment, conviction, diligence, fairness, forbearance, generosity, gratitude, honesty, hope, integrity, peace, perseverance, patience, responsibility, self-acceptance etc. The outcomes of emotional entanglements are painful experiences, inner passivity, depression and suicides. The best remedy is: 'not suppress emotions, but restore balance' by decreasing the emotional entanglements through a soothing mother's touch.

Such an emotional entanglement conception may be felt exceptional in the sense that it has a vital role to play for asserting the sustainability of better human life making humans more responsible for regulating the emotions and establish a harmonious order among the energy-functions both within and outside the environment.

Recent Research outcomes:

Dr. Tallie Z. Baram (neurologist and neuroscientist) has found that maternal care and other sensory input triggers activity in a baby's developing brain that improves cognitive function and builds resilience to stress. A mother's touch not only provides a feeling of security, comfort and love but it does much more. Studies have revealed that sensory stimuli from mother can modify genes that control a key messenger of stress called Corticotropin-Releasing Hormone (CRH) or specifically quanta.

The cellular pathways of the epigenetic process by which maternal touch reduces the expression of CRH in the hypothalamus have been identified. Detecting sensory input, DNA in brain cells in this stress-sensitive region activates a neuron-restrictive silencer factor, which limits CRH. Without the interference of excess stress-triggered CRH, neural dendrites in the hypothalamus can fully develop, which leads to stress resilience. The fact is that brain structure is influenced by the environment in early life, and especially by the treatment called 'mother's touch'.

References

1. Ancient Indian Insights and Modern Science, Kalpana M. Paranjape,1996
2. Consciousness: A Deeper Scientific Research, Professor Jonathan Shear, Prof. S.P. MUkherjee, RMIC Kolkkata - 2006
3. The treasure chest of knowledge and wisdom from India, Nataraja and Company Pvt.Ltd, Cehennai , 1995