

WORDS OF WISDOM

The end of all education is man making

It is the moral nature of man by which he rises to good and noble thoughts. The different sciences show us the world as it is. Ethics tells us what it ought to be. It enables man to know how he should act. Man has two windows to his mind: through one he can see his own self as it is; through the other, he can see what it ought to be.

There are some who believe that moral principles are not intended to be practiced in this world; they are meant for the other world – the world which lies beyond death. A great thinker has said, “If you wish to attain perfection, you must begin from this very day to live according to the laws of morality at any cost.”

In the path of morality there is no such thing as reward for moral behaviour. If a man does some good deed, he does not do it to win applause; he does it because he must. For him doing good is but a higher kind of food, if one may compare food and goodness. And if someone should give him an opportunity to do a good deed, he would feel grateful just as a starving man would be grateful to the giver of food and bless him.
